All of them are designed to educate people about the dangers of email scams. Feel free to take from it what you can - but please give credit where it's due. The truth is out there, but it is often scattered among people who have no regard for anyone but their wallets. The Scam-A-Rama will be highlighting some incidents as they unfold. Please feel free to comment or contact me privately. This is by no means a complete list of every scam-a-rama. Rather, this will be an ongoing list of incidents - so if you see an episode we have missed, feel free to notify us via our contact page. When reading a scam-a-rama story, please understand that while it is as accurate as possible, it's based on the Scam-A-Rama web site's experiences. This means that we cannot guarantee it 100%. Also, for all of the stories in the Scam-A-Rama, there is always another side to the story - i.e., the victims. We want to hear the victims and get the whole story. In the interest of full disclosure, we want you to know that we do receive some compensation when a story is published. This allows us to continue to cover these stories and the scams that often target them. If you think that we are underpaid, consider this - our labor is not free. We also do not have a choice in what we write about, how we write about it, and where we put the stories. While most of our stories have multiple

Key Macro is a simple GUI for Mac OS X, allowing you to generate keystrokes (Mac keyboard) and create macros. It is basically a GUI version of Keyboard Maestro. Key Macro does not require any additional installations, and has no need to add any developer tools to your system. No Mac OS X 10.5 or later is required. Create your own keystrokes With Key Macro you can set up complex key sequences, that will be executed automatically when you press a certain key combination. The options let you build an elaborate set of keystrokes, using the following features: * Fields * Conditions * Actions * Loops * Sequences * Timers For more information, simply go to the Key Macro page and click on any item. Update and remember your keystrokes Key Macro will remember all your keystrokes and macros. For each new keystroke or macro, the program will add it to a list, so that you can easily access them later. By default, you will be asked if you want to save a copy of the current keystrokes to a file. You can also decide whether Key Macro is only saved, or actually the program will be installed on your Mac. Key Macro is a freeware and available for download from the homepage. As part of a research project at VU Amsterdam, Professor Theo van den Boogaard is working on the future of roads. The topics of this research are illustrated in his lecture, which the Centre for Advanced Research in Transport hosts. Professor van den Boogaard developed the idea of artificial intelligence for vehicle operation. The goal is to offer solutions for better, more efficient vehicle operation. It is about using computers to develop optimal traffic schemes and handling situations such as high density traffic, heavy congestion, and so on. The computer is set up to use its intuition to produce solutions, based on sound data and research findings. The computer also has an eye for taking the driver's cues. However, in the end it should be the driver who sets the vehicle's speed or turns the steering wheel. Professor van den Boogaard anticipates that the answers he is seeking will help us to control congestion, optimise traffic, and have an extra bit of
